Hi there! My name's Jem and I'm an illustrator based in London.

I like to think of my work as a means of solving problems, bridging gaps and attracting an audience. I'm particularly interested in packaging and branding design however I am still open to working on a wide range of projects within the design industry.

I am most comfortable when working in a team or busy studio environments but can also appreciate working solo to generate ideas and produce artworks.

As you'll see, my working style is extremely adaptive and I find it evolves to compliment each task asked of me. This is of course crucial when it comes to advancing/developing a current brand's identity. I have a large amount of experience working in fast paced and demanding roles from quick project turnarounds to working pub shifts in Twickenham on a rugby day. I am confident in diving straight into roles and won't hesitate to share my ideas while also respecting the current dynamic of any team I'd be joining.

I am:

- Familiar with SEO and Social media campaigning
- Efficient in Photoshop and Indesign
- Keen to work as part of a team to achieve goals
- A fast learner and always endeavouring to develop my skills
- Confident working with briefs and creating design solutions
- Driven by a desire to solve problems and support those around me
- Confident working under high pressure and time constraints
- Clearly a fan of lists!

My previous Clients include:

- Wacom
- St Austell Print co.
- Falmouth university
- Iris worldwide
- King Edward VII hospital
- Esspressini
- Immediate Media
- BBC
- Pavilion
- Blendjet

I hope to be considered for future work and have the opportunity to work alongside you and your team!
